

WORKSHOP ON EGG TEMPERA PAINTING

Program : 6 days

The course aims to rediscover the ancient technique of painting with egg tempera .

By "tempera" we mean a coloured paste obtained by mixing pigments with glues (binders) like egg, fig milk, waxes or other water soluble substances. In the mid-15th century this technique slowly began to include oily components, gradually coming to resemble what we now know as oil painting.

The laboratory's aim is to teach students to create a work of art using the old method of mixing pigment with a natural binder (an egg), revisiting the places where the techniques were developed and tracing the technique's historical development.

The actual working materials and tools will be used during the course, as well as the basic elements of painting technique.

- Program
- The wooden backing ( it is covered with cloth or thin canvase and it is primed)
- The drawing
- The pouncing technique
- The Gilding (bole , Gouache gilding)
- The painting
- The Varnishing

Teacher

Fabio Bernabei , Stefano Garosi , Emmanouil Spanakis

Fabio Bernabei

He was born in Rapolano Terme in 1957. In 1977 he began restoring paintings under the direction of Prof. Silvio Di Volo, then becoming his assistant. In 1985 he set up the "Bernabei Restoration Studio" and, while undertaking painting restoration work, also taught mainly in the fields of: Old painting techniques, egg tempera according to Tuscan principles, oil painting and preparation of materials for the various painting techniques. He taught courses in history of art, with particular emphasis on recognising and obtaining local materials (e.g. raw sienna). Since 1998 he has been studying the art of engraving.

Stefano Garosi

He was born in Florence in 1945. After gaining a diploma at Art School, he became an apprentice and co-worker at various studios in the following sectors of work: painting restoration, gilding and decoration, restoration of wooden supports, and the restoration of polychrome and gilt art works in wood. In 1966 he worked with the Studi Monteoliveto on a restoration after the flooding of Florence. Since 1969 he has restored old and contemporary paintings, frescos and art works in wood belonging to the Local Authorities, Churches and Museums. In doing so he has worked with numerous Offices of the Ministry for Monuments and Fine Arts. In 1976 he started teaching and has now become a Lecturer in Painting Restoration at the Piccola Accademia dello Sprone (Florence), the Istituto Statale d'Arte (State Artistic Institute) in Florence, the Scuola di Restauro (School for Restoration) of the Province of Florence, the Ente di Formazione Professionale (Institution for Professional Education and Training) in Cagliari. He also works with the School for Restoration in Yokohama, Japan.

Emmanouil Spanakis

He was born in Grevena, Greece in 1952. He was awarded a diploma by the Academy of Fine Arts, Athens. Following some professional work experience in Greece, including teaching courses in Byzantine Art and fresco painting, he moved to Italy. He opened a studio devoted to Byzantine Art and taught at the Accademia di Belle Arti (Academy of Fine Arts) in Perugia, while creating frescos for Churches in various parts of Greece. Since 2007 he lives and works in Florence.
