By WIKIPEDIA :

The church dates to the early twelfth century and now appears considerably different due to several alterations during the centuries. The most interesting part is the lower section of the facade, which goes back to the Roman era, when the church was to be a kind of nartece. It consists of two mullioned windows and is decorated with a dichromate pattern in the arches. Its striking exterior makes it an extremely rare example of the Romanesque church in Tuscany; in the fifteenth century a portico was added whose columns are topped with cubic capitelli and in pulvini, completed with a second-order early nineteenth century, in imitation of the underlying structure.

THE PROGRAM

in GREVE IN CHIANTI

Every THURSDAY

or any another day arranged by phone

The day is spent in the heart of the Chianti wine producing region where the landscape has inspired the greatest artists of the Renaissance, where every place, every element one comes into contact with becomes a photograph. Under the guidance of the teacher, you will improve your photographic sensibility. Basic theoretical constructs will connect you directly to the practical aspects of photography which will then enable you to make the best use of your camera. La Macina di San Cresci is equipped with a large-screen projector to display your work. Analysis and constructive critique of your day's output with the teacher and other participants will enhance your picture taking process.
